A match is a public lead, not proof of authorship.

Why this creator?

- Matching image on the selected creator's public post
- The source's posting account matches the researched artist; posting an image alone is not authorship proof.

Three turns in the trail.

Most image searches stop at a match. SourceTrace keeps the trail together, so the strongest lead and the evidence behind it stay in the same report.

01 SEARCH

Start with the image.

Drop in an image or public link to find matching copies and useful matches across public sources.

02 TRACE

Follow the credit.

Connect signatures, captions, handles, credits, and linked public profiles around the image.

03 VERIFY

See why it matters.

Review the strongest lead, source links, dates, and corrections before you pass the credit on.

VISUAL PRODUCT SEARCH

Find a product from its image.

Search public product listings that look like your image, then follow the seller link to check current price and availability.
